

We are continuing work to bring services back online

Stunden später... Dann: status.secondlifegrid.net – da ist aber irgendetwas schwer abgeraucht in Kalifornien:

[5:23am PDT] [UPDATE] Work continues to restore all services.

[4:23am PDT] [UPDATE] We are continuing work to bring services back online.

[3:23am PDT] [UPDATE] We are still working on rectifying the problems and will let you know when that changes.

[2:21am PDT] [UPDATE] Work continues to bring services back online.

[1:23am PDT] [UPDATE] We are continuing our work to bring our services back online and will keep you updated here.

[29th April 2010 – 12:30am PDT] [UPDATE] We are continuing to investigate current issues and will post updates here as we have them.

[11:23pm PDT] [UPDATE] Logins, the Land Store, the LindeX, XstreetSL.com and registrations have been disabled as we continue to work on these issues.

[10:45pm PDT] [UPDATE] Logins are currently still down. The website and support portal have come back online, though they may be slow to load or experience errors. XstreetSL.com is inaccessible as well. We're working to resolve this as quickly as we can – please continue to check back for updates.

Solche Meldungen gehörten seit mehr als einem Jahr eigentlich zur Vergangenheit in Second Life. Aber shit happens. (In dem Häuschen residiert übrigens mein Gor-Avatar. Alles selbst gemacht.)