

Rettet den Frauensport!

Guiney, who made waves after speaking out after being University of Pennsylvania's Lia Thomas, a biological male swimmer. When no one else spoke up, Riley did. And she has been tirelessly standing up for the protection of women's sports and spaces ever since. Inarguably, her advocacy has made her an icon for women's rights and the face of the movement.

Paula Scanlan

"The more voices we have, the harder it's going to be to shut us down."

Former University of Pennsylvania swimmer, Paula Scanlan, was shamed after admitting the felt unsafe sharing a locker room with biological male, Lia Thomas, who joined the UPenn women's swim team next season. Yet rather than sink away and hide, she found her voice and began standing up for women's safety. As a survivor of sexual assault that occurred in a bathroom at UP, this issue is truly personal for Paula. Today, she has become one of the most powerful advocates for protecting women's spaces.

Adam B. Coleman

"I believe in speaking wrong at the right time."

Die Werbung und der Account des Unternehmens wurden von TikTok gelöscht. „Unsere Überprüfung legt nahe, dass Ihr Werbeinhalt die Werbepolitik von TikTok verletzen könnte, weil er beleidigende Inhalte zeigt.“

Es beleidigt die Woken, wenn man für Frauensport wirbt. Aha. Da muss man erst mal drauf kommen.

„I believe in speaking wrong at the right time.“ Well said, dude.